PILES! PILES! PILES!

A Sure Cure Found at Last—No One Need Suffer!

A sure cure for blind, bleeding, itching and ulcerated piles has been discovered by Dr. William (an Indian remedy) called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of twenty-five or thirty years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments and electrics do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed,) acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave me such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment.

Also cures itch, barber's itch, salt rheum, tetter, ringworm, scald head, chapped hands, sore nipples, sore tips, old obstinate ulcers and sores, &c.

SKIN DISEASE.
F. Drake, Esq., Cleveland, O., suffered beyond all description from a skin disease which appeared on his hands, head and face, and nearly destroyed his eyes. The most careful doctoring failed to help him, and after all had failed he used Dr. Frazier's Magic Ointment and was cured by a few applications.

The first and positive cure for skin diseases ever discovered.

Dr. Frazier's Root Bitters.

Frazier's Root Bitters are not a dram-shop whisky beverage, but are strictly medicinal in every sense. They act strongly upon the liver and kidneys, keep the bowels open and regular, make the weak strong, heal the lungs, build up the nerves and cleanse the blood and system of every impurity.

For dizziness, rush of blood to the head tending to apoplexy, dyspepsia, fever and ague, dropsy, pimples and blotches, scrofulous humors and sores, tetter, ring worm, white swelling, erysipelas, sore eyes and for young men suffering from weakness or debility caused from imprudence, and to females in delicate health, Frazier's Root Bitters are especially recommended.

Dr. Frazier: I have used two bottles of your Root Bitters for dyspepsia, dizziness, weakness and kidney disease, and they did me more good than the doctors and all the medicine I ever used. From the first dose I took I began to mend, and I am now in perfect health, and feel as well as I ever did. I consider your medicine one of the greatest blessings.

WIVES AND HUSBANDS.

The Later Not Responsible for the Former's Misdoings.
[Boston Herald.]

Up in New Hampshire Mrs. Harris and her husband sued Mrs. Webster and her husband because the latter woman had spoken slanderous words of the former. Mr. Webster demurred, saying he had done no wrong, and didn't care to be brought into court because his wife was alleged to have used her tongue too freely, and the Supreme Court has sustained the demurrer. The decision which involves the rights of married men as well as the wrongs of married women, is long and interesting. Judge Foster who draw it discusses the changes which have taken place in the legal relations of husband and wife, and the responsibility therefrom arising.

Under the English common law the wife could neither sue nor be sued apart from her husband. The old doctrine was that "man and wife are the same flesh." Herein an old writer said: "The common law shaketh hands with the divinity," an illustration says Judge Foster, "of the habit of presenting every established fact which is too bad to admit of any other defense as an injunction of religion." So, under the common law, the married woman's contracts were void, her legal personality being extinguished. Petruccio declared:

"I will be master of what is mine own:
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,
My household stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything."

As Judge Foster states it, the women being thus utterly within her husband's control, his chattel, his "ox," he became personally and solely answerable for her torts, as for the trespasses of his other domestic cattle; and, of course, the law could pursue no other consistent system than that which declared all her contracts absolutely void. Such was the social and legal status of a married woman centuries ago; and the change of her condition before the law seems to be much less in England than in New Hampshire. The influence of Christianity and a more widely diffused and higher system of moral and religious education have gradually ameliorated women's social condition and elevated her to a state of dignity and importance she possesses to-day. Like all the changes of advancing civilization, this change has been very gradual, but it has been a steady march from slavery to freedom. Herbert Spencer says that in the United States women have reached a higher status in the social structure than anywhere else, and Judge Foster adds that it is equally true that in many of the States, certainly in New Hampshire more than anywhere else, have the legal distinctions between the sexes been swept away. He continues:

"Thus, by progress in the same direction, by changes religious, social, customary, legislative and judicial, the rule of the common law has been abolished and obliterated; and is no longer possible to say that in New Hampshire a married woman is a household slave or chattel, or that in New Hampshire the conjugal unity is represented solely by the husband. By custom and by statute the wife is now joint master of the household and not a slave or a servant. The rule now is that her legal existence is not suspended. So practically has the ancient unity become dissevered and dissolved that the wife may not only have her separate property, contracts, credits, debts, wages, and causes of separate action growing out of a violation of her personal rights, but she may enter into legal contract with her husband and enforce it by suit against him."

What follows? Simply that, since the wife's property is not her husband's, her earnings are not his, her legal subjection to him no greater than his to her, no reason remains for holding him liable for her wrong doing any more than for making her responsible for his. So when the Court came to pass upon the case before it, the question being why Mr. Webster, an innocent man, should be held responsible for the torts of Mrs. Webster, the Court was obliged to say that, having done no wrong neither he nor his property could be holden for any act of his wife, and "that the husband of these female parties are strangers, in law, to the proceeding, and that the demurrer should be sustained." In New Hampshire then, if nowhere else, the hen-pecked husband can sit quietly and watch the triumphal progress of the female-suffrage movement, and all the other movements. If he does lose a little something, he also gains. His wife is not his "slave," as she might be if he lived in some more conservative State, but if she lets her tongue run at its highest rate of vibration against her neighbor she cannot be sued. Happy Mr. Webster. Unfortunate Mrs. Harris.

ENGLAND, a tariff for revenue only country, pays double and treble the wages paid in Germany, a country under a strictly protective tariff. They know it is false, but they keep repeating the falsehoods like parrots.

THE Signal Service costs over a million of dollars a year. Gen. Hazen, the present Chief of the Corps, stated in a recent letter that Howgate had stolen $140,000 from the fund, and the records show that this robbery was mainly corrected in a single year, without the slightest objection on the part of the accounting officers. They passed all the "vouchers," with fraud conspicuous on many of them.

It is suggested in a Tennessee journal that a better plan than lies in compulsory education is to employ excellent teachers and to pay them, in addition to their salaries, a percentage on every willing or careless child whom they are unable to coax into school. It is further suggested that a discount should be imposed on them for every child dropping out of school, and that their salaries should be discontinued if they fail to keep up their schools.

CONGRESSIONAL MATTERS.

Dr. A. G. Browning, of Fleming County.

The next congressional contest in this district will be for actual political ascendancy. Encouraged by disensions, more or less real, in our party, and backed by a corruption fund at Washington, the radicals will make a bold push for victory, believing in possible success. Every sentiment of duty and patriotism should arouse at this; every consideration sink, save that of perpetuating our principles. The success of our party can alone do this. There are democratic votes enough in our district to not only win a victory, but a victory so decided as to blast the hope for radical rule. Harmony is essential to bring out this vote, and this can be effected only by the selection of a candidate whose record cannot be successfully assailed. The occasion demands a man of capacity, correct morals and one who, heedless of party animosities, has every time seen his duty in stubborn support of principles, and the organization which upholds them; a man who, politically, has estranged and embittered no one of his party, and for whom, without hazard, every democrat can conscientiously vote.

The life-long friends of Dr. A. G. Browning—those who know him best—claim that he meets the indication in every particular, and is the man for the occasion. His nomination would command the solid vote of the party, and our success would be assured.

TRUE BLUE.

THE SPURIOUS TREASURY ISSUES.

The Counterfeiters in Collusion with the Bureau of Engraving and Printing—Other Plates Still in Their Possession.

WASHINGTON, May, 31—Whatever may be the outcome of the present investigation at the Treasury regarding the spurious issues of Government bonds, it is now known that other plates that those from which the bonds found on Doyle were printed are in the hands of the dangerous gang of counterfeiters and forgers who for years past have defied justice.

Different plates have from time to time been surrendered to the Treasury as a condition of immunity when the holders or their confederates were arrested or indicted. There were considered more valuable than the imprisonment or punishment of the criminals. But it seems the stock has not been exhausted. The condoning of these felonies has operated as a stimulant to new crimes, and has extended the business of the class engaged in them. The officials of the Treasury, in dreading to make an exposure of facts that could not always be concealed, have given indirect encouragement to the very crime they sought to prevent. The escape of plates from which false issues of bonds and of other government paper were made from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, makes it certain that there must have been collusion between some of the persons employed in the bureau and the professional counterfeiters. The severest tests of the highest skill outside this bureau have demonstrated conclusively that these issues were printed from plates exactly similar to those used for the Treasury, and absolutely indistinguishable from them when compared by the best experts.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, like the Government Printing Office, has long been a sort of political hospital, where the friends and the peculiar favorites of members of congress are nourished at the public expense, with much unsavory scandal. A loose mode of appointment, and too often the bad antecedents of the appointees, have exposed the Treasury to such costly experience as is now made known unwillingly. This danger is constantly imminent while the existing vicious system is permitted to continue, and to taint the integrity of what should be unimpeachable securities.

It is now an open secret that Government bonds and Treasury notes have been largely counterfeited and successfully issued. It is also known that such bonds were printed and uttered from plates identical with those of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. And it is believed, though not yet established, that copies of these plates for silver certificates are in possession of the counterfeiters' combination.

These are serious matters. They have naturally perplexed the present Secretary of the Treasury, though they did not occur under his administration of the department. Some of them have just come to light, Judge Folger is striving to unravel the mystery by following the threads that have fallen into his hands.

The question naturally rises to every lip. How were these counterfeiters and fraudulent issues that were redeemed at the Treasury provided for without appropriations by congress? Who redeemed them, and to what extent? How did the books of the Treasury balance without any statement of this redemption? Why was the truth concealed from congress?

No satisfactory answer may now be given to these pregnant inquiries. But the day is not far distant when a full exposure must come from a change of administration. The long career of fraud, of corruption, and robbery by the Republican party is drawing near to its close. When the collapse comes, there will be nothing left of it but a record of shame and of outrage unparalleled in the history of free government. And the names of some conspicuous leaders who have grown into wealth from officeholding will go down in the history of these times blackened with disgrace!

The Court of Appeals has decided that Flemingsburg is a city.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says: Those interested in the projected Cincinnati and Ohio River Road report that matters are fast taking shape, and that there is no good reason why the company should not be organized at once, and preparations made for commencing the work of construction.

The following is Prof. Vennor's latest weather prediction:

Just as stormy and backward weather characterized the spring of 1882 and the whole northern hemisphere, so in like manner will the stormy and severe autumn of the year 1882 be as extensively experienced. Why? Is it always the case that a cold and backward spring is succeeded by a cold and stormy autumn? No, not always; but you this spring had a "weather relationship," in my system of working. The general law of compensation is acting pretty much in the same manner as it did in another instance I have before me, and it has yet got to finish its programme. People laughed at the "late frost and snowfalls in southern sections" predicted by the same theory, but the laugh has ceased. Now, again they smile (not laugh this time) at the idea of June frosts. Let us wait and see. Possibly we may have a "broil up" towards midsummer for a brief period, and just before the relapse to cool and cold weather, but this will hardly constitute a warm summer. Bear it in mind we do not dogmatically assert the foregoing, but merely offer it as our opinion—which most people have now had a chance of testing to some extent.

MR. GEORGE W. TUDOR, on the eve of his departure for Europe yesterday, gave a banquet at the Barcroft Restaurant to Haucke's Reed and Cornet Band, of which he has long been a member, and to a number of his other friends. The banquet was served in Mr. Barcroft's best style, and was heartily enjoyed by all present. After the banquet the band escorted Mr. Tudor to the Bonanza, playing a number of old familiar airs, among them, "Home sweet Home," "Dixie" and "Old Kentucky Home." Mr. Tudor will be accompanied in his travels by Mr. William Willocks, also of this city. Geo. W. Tudor, Jr., will go with his father as far as New York. The many friends of both gentlemen wish them a pleasant trip and safe return home.

"Seen There."

"I believe you are taking quite an interest in spirits just at present?" said a rather seedy-looking old party, sliding into the city editor's room.

"Yes, we are devoting some space to that sort of thing," said the city editor. "Got a communication?"

"Well, no," said the seedy party. "But I can give you a good deal of information on the subject. You see, I've worked the medium racket myself. I used to be one of the best materializers going, and I've seen the time I could set a whole set of parlor furniture dancing a Highland fling by simply slapping my fingers. These modern fellows are no good, and don't you forget it. They bungle the whole business, and give everything away before they have hardly commenced a sitting. What you want is cheek, and plenty of it. Don't cave in because a crank happens to ask you troublesome questions. Just get up an infernal rapping under his chair and scare him into silence, or get your assistant to—"

"Assistant?" asked the editor. "Then you confess—"

"Confess! of course I confess," said the seedy party, "that's what I came here for. Yes, you have to employ an assistant, and very often the whole business depends upon his judgment. Why, I have an assistant who could run the snap just as well as I could, and he was death on stirring up the uneasy ones after the light was turned down. One time he touched a piece of ice to the back of an old gal's neck, and put her in a fit. We had to skip that town in short order I tell you. That was his great trouble. He never could take in the true inwardness of a circle. My motto is, first be sure of your circle, and then stave ahead. If they are farmers and that kind of thing why let 'em down easy. A little will go a great way with 'em. If you strike a city bring in your heavy guns. Lead off with a dozen or so communications from the old world, work up a little rapping business, and then when you've got 'em nervous enough just suddenly spring the cabinet act on 'em; but there is one thing a well-trained medium will never forget."

"And what is that?" asked the editor. "He will always keep himself between the gas fixtures or lamp and his circle."

"Exactly," said the editor. "Yes," said the seedy party, slapping the desk with his hand, "more good, likely mediums have bust up in that way than any other. They put too much confidence in the circle. Whiff! Up went the gas, and that settled the whole business. You're always sure to rip down a curtain in getting out of sight, and there are all your properties exposed to everybody, but I've got out of one or two scrapes of that sort in my time, and don't you forget it."

"How did you manage it?" asked the editor.

"Oh, I just threw the whole thing on the spirits, and played the innocent injured act."

"But would the people believe you?" asked the editor.

"Believe me," said the seedy party, "my dear boy, if you want to know just how much the people will believe, go into the spirit business. They never stand on ceremony. They just swallow everything whole, and the bigger the mouthful the easier it seems to go down with 'em. You just take a back at the spirit business for a month or so, and if you don't agree that I'm right, I'll staid the drinks for the whole office. Talk about the side show and dime museum business. Well, those fellows know something about guys, but we can discount 'em every time. They may stick a stray leg on a cow now and then, and call a South Carolina darky a Zulu, but for your simon pure humbug—"

"Then you go so far as to call your business a humbug?" said the editor.

"My dear boy, I've been there," said the seedy party, as he lit the stump of a cigar, and sauntered out with the air of a man who had relieved his conscience.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"What your daughter wants," said an over-candid music teacher to a millionaire whose education was not equal to his fortune, "is capacity." "Indeed!" was the astonished reply, "well, then, I'll order one immediately, no matter what it costs."

BATCHELDER'S
Ventilated Egg Case.
Patented February 15, 1881.
Indispensible to Merchants Shippers And Producers.

The outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These Trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candled, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case without rehandling.

For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.

The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, adding, or breakage, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in storage. Size of 30 dozen No. 1 cases 25x12x14, weighs 20 pounds.

PRICES IN CHICAGO.
Shipper's No. 1, 30 doz. Case with Fillers complete..... 65 Cents.
